

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

BOOK REVIEWS.

All book reviews are by the editor in chief unless otherwise expressly stated.

The Lawyers' Reports Annotated. New Series. Book 19. Burdett A. Rich, Henry P. Farnham, Editors. 1909. Rochester, N. Y. The Lawyers' Co-Operative Publishing Company. Price $4.00.

Volume 19 of this admirable series is accompanied by a Digest of Volumes 13 to 18—an inspection of which reinforces the excellent opinion which every one who uses these volumes must necessarily have. Volume 19 contains the usual number of well selected and admirably annotated cases. There is quite a lengthy and valuable annotation to Cahill v. Stone on page 1094 in regard to the question of "attractive nuisances." A question which has become somewhat famous in this country in connection with the "Turntable Cases." This note, which is in fact a short treatise, will be found to cover the whole question from almost every standpoint. As noted in a previous number of the LAW REGISTER (ante, p. 74), the English House of Lords has decided a case lately in which they hold the converse of the proposition as laid down in Virginia. This case while alluded to in the note, not yet having been reported, the annotator only refers to briefly.

A question of novelty is annotated in the notes attached to Braem v. Clarke, in which the North Carolina Court held that a personal wrong aggravated damages for trespass on realty. This was a suit for unlawful trespass upon the defendant's land and the wrong claimed as aggravation was improper conduct towards the plaintiff's wife. The lower Court overruled the demurrer to the declaration and the Supreme Court of North Carolina sustained the Court.

There is an interesting note on page 1037 as to the respective rights of husband and wife to the income of products from an estate held by the entirety, and on page 1006, as to the Limitation of Carriers' Liability for Passengers' Baggage.

We select these references at random and this brief review might be extended to great length if space permitted. It is a rare thing that we have not found in each volume of this new series something for immediate use.